This department has entered the second stage of service to Tribune readers. Primarily it was intended merely to separate the sheep of advertising from the goats-and hang a bell on the goats. But now it goes beyond mere identification. It embraces a human nature study of both sheep and goats. You are invited to assist. For every letter printed in this department describing experiences-pleasant or unpleasant-with advertisers of merchandise, excepting only patent medicines, The Tribune will send $2.00, payable in any merchandise of any Tribune advertiser. For the most important letter each month a special prise of $50.00, payable similarly, will be awarded. Name printed or withheld-as you prefer, but must be signed or we will not know where to send the prize order. Address: The Ad-Visor, The Tribune, New York.

ception, and my close connections with merchants in various lines of business give me occasion to note what good work you are doing along the lines of removing misrepresentation from advertising. It has seemed another, however, that you lay slightly too much stress on the willingness of a merchant to accept returned merchant dise as a criterion of his honesty of purpose. While I believe that money spent for unsatisfactory purchases should be refunded, there is no doubt that the privilege of returning goods is being sadly abused in many cases. I have been an interested reader of your department since its in

This is undoubtedly a high percentage, but it cannot be denied that everywhere merchants suffer unnecessary loss by permitting customers to return goods at all.

Aside from the financial loss, which is no doubt partly compensated for by a gain in good will, there is a serious menace from a sanitary standpoint involved in the purchase of goods which may previously have been sent to a person with infectious disease.

In several of the Western cities the rotail merchants have decided to discontinue the privilege of allowing goods to be returned. There are shrewd business men in New York who think that the time is not far distant when the department stores of this city will adont

During my Christmas shopping one incident stood out which will long be remembered. I nurchased a solid silver cigarette case from the Havone Corporation, on Maiden Lane. They offered to monogram it gratis. The name of the person I was giving it to was Mix. I asked that this name be engraved on the case as one word, instead of as a monogram, as otherwise one would imagine his name was Milton Isaac Xavier, or something like that.

Some days later I stopped in for the case, and discovered that it had been monogrammed, instead of the name having been spelled out. I was disappointed and disgusted, and telling them that they could keep the case il had already paid for it) I waiked out. They called to me, but I was so angry that I did not return. Imagine my delight the next day to receive a letter from them telling me that I was the one to be pleased, and to come to their store and select any case of the same value and that they would engrave it exactly as I wished.

I did so, and received the most courteous treatment that has ever I did so, and received the most courteous treatment that has ever been tendered me in New York. The other case was worthless to them, but apparently it made no difference as long as I was satisfied.

Not long ago there appeared a letter in your column referring to an ad, which appeared in The Globe and in which the buyer wrote you of having experienced some dissatisfaction with the goods. Your answer to this letter insimuated that The Globe published many ads, which were not just what were represented.

Now, I am a reader of The Globe, and I think your answer was grossly unfair. In the first place, if you read The Globe you will notice that The Globe considers it a "favor if they will promptly report any failure on the part of an advertiser to make good any representation contained in a Globe advertisement."

Why did you not give your correspondent that answer?
In the second place, you simply make a broad, general statement and give no facts to support your contention.

I believe The Globe to be just as good a paper in every respect as is The Tribune any time.

the fabric had either been poorly woven or that there was some other defect present, because no indication of wear showed itself otherwise. From my viewpoint, I felt that a shirt which was of silk and linen mixture certainly should give at least as good wear as one of pure silk, and, since it received the same treatment in washing as was given other silk shirts, the defect was unwarranted. On the other hand, as far as the deartment store was a concentred, the surpressed had been made. the department store was concerned, the purchase had been made a long time ago, the shirt had been worn and washed, and, although the wear which was received might not have been entirely satisfactory, there was certainly an excellent loophole through which to dege ad-

I wrote a letter to R. H. Macy & Co, and mailed them the shirt. score one against Macy's. It is all the pleasanter to give due credit for wise and considerate handling of a case, in this instance of the shirt.

I was in one of the big stores downtown, in the dress goods department. I had selected the material I wanted, but was dubious about the washing of the same, so I asked the young girl who was waiting on me, "Are you sure (with much emphasis on the sure) this material will wash!" The girl, who was apparently totally inexperienced, was not tactful enough to evade the question, or, as is usual a such cases, say it would wash, whether it was the truth or not, flushed and hesitated, and finally stammered in a bewildered manner: "Why-er-fer-really could not say, madam. I have never washed t myself. I'm sure I don't know." The girl was not at all impudent, but simply confused by my urgency.

If customers would only stop and think sometimes, I am sure they would not ask the many foolish questions they do, very often forcing a sale-girl to tell an untruth rather than lose a sale, or, if heard giving an answer such as the above, being taken to task or losing their situa-
